THIBAUT GREVET

Thibaut Grevet is a French director and photographer with a truly visionary eye.

Thibaut captures moments as they unfold, unscripted and unfiltered, resulting in dreamlike and abstract visuals. He sees things that others don't, and through his work, he brings these hidden moments and scenes to life, in a truly captivating way.

His unique perspective in his photography and direction work has earned him incredible success. His commercial work includes campaigns for Mercedes, Louis Vuitton, Calvin Cline, Moncler or Salomon.

Earlier this year Thibaut published his first solo book - BLURRED - for which he compiled images shot over the past years in which figures and subjects appear indistinct and blurred. A roaring success. Also this year his images for James Blakes' new album 'Playing Robots Into Heaven' was part of a show that Blake performed at Tate Modern London.

Thibaut lives near Biarritz.
